HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 14 years old.

(1) Is there any harm for your boy friend to come to see you of an evening if mother does not care?

(2) How late should he stay?

(3) Is there any harm in giving a boy your picture?

(4) Why should a boy not kiss a girl when he leaves?

(5) What would be a nice present to give my mother for her birthday?

WINNIE.

(1) Why, no, my dear, if he conducts himself properly. (2) A little girl of your age should be in bed by 10 o'clock at the latest. He should leave about 9 o'clock. (3) Some boys make a collection of girls' pictures to show off to their boy friends. Better not give him the picture and be the exceptional girl. (4) Because when she lets him kiss her she knows her with all the other cheap girls he knows who let the boys kiss them.

When boys and girls get beyond being little children they should save their kisses for their own relatives and for the one they some day expect to marry. (5) Give her something pretty to wear. If you could make a necklace of salt or rose beads she would probably love it. The recipes have often been given in this department.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please write a recipe for two gallons of ice cream and all about how to make it?

CONSTANT READER.

The following recipe makes one gallon of ice cream. Double the quantities to make two gallons:

Boil the yolks of four eggs in a quart of good milk, with two tablespoons cornstarch. Be careful not to scald. Then run through fine sieve to get it smooth and add one quart of good cream (rich milk will do), three cups granulated sugar, vanilla flavor and the beaten whites of the four eggs.

If you don't want to use more eggs and have a two-gallon freezer, fill freezer with milk and you will have a good ice cream. Be careful not to fill freezer too full, however.

Chop ice fine. Have plenty of rock salt on hand. Set freezer, and pack around it alternate layers of ice and salt. Be generous with the salt. Then turn the freezer until the cream is frozen; take out can, remove the paddle, put cover tight on can, put back in ice and salt packed tightly about it and leave until ready to serve.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young man of 18, bright, have no bad habits. I live in the country. There is a girl in this neighborhood whom I would like to correspond with. She is the same age. I have known her for a number of years. How shall I get started?

H. E. H.

That's easy, my boy. Just write to her and ask if she will answer your letters if you write to her regularly. However, if she lives near you, why not go and see her? She might appreciate visits more than correspondence.

"I am tired of publicity," Mrs. Anthony of Muncie, Ind., told the New York reporters as she took the steamer, and to prove it she added that she was taking 37 trunks filled with dresses from an Indianapolis dressmaker, "and I think they will be a revelation in Paris."

Bed Time Tales

Dogwood Blooms

ONCE upon a time in the long, long ago, dogwood blossoms were very, very beautiful, even more beautiful than they are now.

But, sad to relate, they were neither modest nor well behaved! They were bold and vain and boastful!

"We are the handsomest flowers in the whole forest," said one blossom, as she unfolded her white petals in the spring time.

"The flowers in the whole forest!" exclaimed another blossom haughtily, "they are not to be mentioned in the same breath with us!"

"Indeed not," said a bud opening a bit in the sunshine, "we are the queens of all!"

Now, just at that very minute the fairy queen happened to pass by, and she noticed the sound of voices.

"Aren't the flowers lovely this fine spring morning?" she said by way of greeting.

"You mean the dogwood flowers," corrected the haughtiest dogwood blossom coldly.

"Oh, no, indeed," answered the queen pleasantly, "I mean all the flowers in the forest—every one is sweet and beautiful!"

"Some fairies have very poor taste," said the haughty dogwood blossom, "any one who really looked could tell that we, and we only are the beautiful flowers of the forest."

"And that we have the biggest blossoms," said another dogwood blossom. "And that we are the very whitest," added a third.

The fairy queen's eyes opened big and round with amazement.

(You see, she was kind and modest herself and she didn't quite know what to make of such vanity in the flowers.)

"Dear me, dear me," she exclaimed, "that that we are the very whitest, is a very nice way for flowers to talk!"

"We don't care! It's true anyway!" exclaimed the bud and she defiantly opened her beautiful big white petals in the sunshine. "We're the very handsomest flowers in the world!"
